Check if Your Browser Can Support HTML5 or Not

Just go to HTML5test through your browser and hit enter. The website will show the score out of 160 on based of some functions such as Doctype, Canvas, Video, Audio, Geolocation, Storage, Offline Web Apps and other HTML5 validations.

HTML5Test (url) – Check Your Web Browser Support for HTML5

The score is calculated by testing for the many new features of HTML5. Each feature is worth one or more points. In some cases the tests go beyond the specification. In the case of audio and video there is are also specific tests for codec support.

In these cases the most points are awarded for supporting the first codec. Each additional codec it supports does result in a couple of bonus points. Apart from the main HTML5 working draft, this test also awards points for supporting related drafts published by the W3C, such as Geolocation, Web SQL Database, Web Workers and many more.

The HTML5 test score is only an indication of how well your browser supports the upcoming HTML5 standard. It does not try to test all of the new features offered by HTML5, nor does it try to test the functionality of each feature it does detect.

Note : Firefox 3.6+ & Chrome 4+ support HTML5 by default.
